

Major Joseph T. Ligon and Mr. R. P. Pinson returned Monday from Harris Springs, where they had been on a short visit. Both Major Ligon and Mr. Pinson lived at Harris Springs right after the war, one living on the northern hill and the other on the southern hill, with the spring between them. The spring, by the way, at this time was known as the Campbell Powder spring and even then was a very popular resort, people coming there from many miles around.
