

When Laurens takes a notion, she is a power. It was a long time before we could get a National Bank. We got one and now we are going to have another. Much trouble was experienced in getting a hook and ladder company, but we got that, and a steam engine also. Now, some of those fine mornings we are going to have a big cotton<sup>N</sup> factory and as soon as the people see it working everybody will want stock, and consequently half a dozen will be built. Laurens never does things by halves, nor does she go half hearted into anything and when thoroughly aroused, this little town is a team.
