A Better Question
Edwin Eugene Ott, 20200706

      If a tree falls in the forest and no one is there to hear, we need not ask does the tree make a sound; rather, we should ask why did the tree fall?

      Whether or not "one in a hundred people who are infected with COVID19 suffer serious illness" is true is based upon presumptions and presentation. We know how many people are dying. The question we should ask is how many can we save?

End